Detroit has been dubbed America's Comeback City and both visitors and locals will attest that it has rightfully earned that title. Just a few years ago, Detroit was in crisis mode. The city's crime and unemployment rates were some of the highest in the country. People fled Motor City, leaving 75 percent of buildings either vacant or only partially occupied. In 2013, the financial crisis resulted in Detroit becoming the largest U.S. city to file for bankruptcy. Detroit had hit rock bottom; but as the saying goes, at rock bottom, there's nowhere else to go but up, and up is exactly the direction Detroit has been heading.

"If you haven't seen Detroit lately, you really haven't seen Detroit," Renee Monforton of the Detroit Convention and Visitors Bureau says of her beloved city's monumental comeback. Businesses, both big and small, are thriving in the Motor City. Large scale investors and young dreamers alike have been swooping into the city, eager to be a part of its rebirth. Detroit is a millennial's playground. The generation is utilizing this affordable land of opportunity and filling the vacancies with artistic ventures and big ideas. The once vacant residences are quickly filling and are nearly 100% occupied. Due to this influx of visionaries flocking the city to chase dreams and affordable housing, new apartment buildings and residencies have been popping up all over Detroit's downtown and midtown. The sprawling riverfront is being restored to its original beauty because of the diligent efforts of The Detroit RiverFront Conservatory therefore the area is accessible for recreational purposes again. Urban gardens are a new trend and the needs of aspiring agriculturalists are accommodated by farms and garden stores. Restaurants and retail shops are flipping their signs to 'open' and new hotels are available for anyone seeking a taste of the immense culture and beauty that Detroit has to offer.

360 Magazine was given the opportunity to get a unique look at the city via a kayaking tour with Riverside Kayak Connection through the Detroit River. We were able to cruise through international waters, as the river flows along the Canadian border, and get up close and personal with the skyline. Take it from us, there is no better way to see the sites than by paddling downstream in the rain. The tour features prime downtown scenic attractions such as the Detroit Boat Club, which is the oldest boat house in the country; the gorgeous Ambassador Bridge, which serves as a connector between Detroit and Canada; the General Motors Renaissance Center; and the other landmark structures of Downtown Detroit.

We even got to paddle under the MacArthur Bridge that was built in 1925. Some of our staff members had chosen to spend the morning testing their luck at the three casino hotels in Detroit. Greektown Casino Hotel is located in Detroit's Greektown Historic District and opened in 2000; MGM Grand Detroit was the first luxury resort casino hotel to open outside of Los Angeles; The MotorCity Casino Hotel is owned by Marian Ilitch, who co-founded Little Caesar's Pizza with her late husband, Mike Ilitch. We met up at the Outdoors Adventure Center. The OAC gives Detroit families the chance to learn about the Michigan outdoors in an entertaining and interactive setting. The center played a pivotal role in the restoration efforts for the riverfront in which we had just paddled on. After taking a look at some of the exhibits, we head over to a nearby town called Hamtramck to play a few games of Fowling. Fowling is an unlikely combination of football, horseshoes, and bowling and was invented in 2001 by Detroit native, Chris Hutt, and a few of his friends. The Fowling Warehouse first opened its doors in 2014 and consists of 20 lanes and two bars with a third in the works. Needless to say, there is no shortage of beer; however, the warehouse is BYOF (bring your own food). After dinner, we were taken to Sugar House and Gold Cash Gold to cleanse our palates with some refreshing cocktails. The day was a never-ending adventure for our staff. In our opinion, Detroit is every activity and sports lover's fantasy destination.

The late Mike Ilitch, founder of international fast food franchise Little Caesar's Pizza, was at the center of Detroit's comeback. The Detroit native never lost faith in his hometown and faithfully stood by the city until his final days. Ilitch was the proud owner of two of the city's major league sports team, the Detroit Tigers baseball team and the Detroit Red Wings hockey team. Ilitch and his family invested in the city and helped to build the foundation of the resurgence. The brand new Little Caesar's Arena is putting Detroit's midtown and downtown on the map. "It's the hub of the entire 50 block development," Tom Wilson, CEO of Olympia Entertainment said, "50 blocks in a major American city is unheard of. It allows us to do many different things that can be the connective tissue between all of the great things in downtown Detroit and midtown Detroit." Wilson personally showed our staff around on a guided tour of the new arena. The arena is home to the Red Wings as well as the Detroit Pistons basketball team. The blueprints and installation of the arena is setting a precedent for future arena construction. The unique design sits 40 feet below the surface of the city which allows the structure to blend with the surrounding neighborhoods that are currently being constructed. Detroit is now the only city in the country to house all four of its major sports teams within four blocks in its downtown core. "It's going to change the way arenas are built in the future," Wilson predicts. We were lucky enough to score tickets to the opening Red Wings game versus the Minnesota Wilds in the new arena. We were seated in a suite and were able to watch the Red Wings kick some Wild butt (4-2) in a luxury location while chowing down on some of the delicious food Little Caesar's Arena has to offer.

Cars may have put Detroit on the map back in the early 1900s, but current residents are doing just fine without owning a car of their own. Metropolitan Detroit provides many forms of public transportation; people can choose to travel via busses, railways, the elevated people mover, and the brand-new QLine. "[The QLine] is a street car system on tracks and it just opened in May [of 2017] and it takes people from the downtown all the way up through our midtown area through the museum district and various attractions." The QLine includes 20 stops and 12 stations. Bikes are another pleasant way to get around the city. Detroit has just introduced a brand-new bike lane that provides peddlers with a safe route for two-wheel travel. 360 had the chance to pedal through the budding neighborhoods of downtown Detroit with the Wheelhouse bike shop. Wheelhouse caters to all sorts of tourists, offering tours to those interested in architecture, public art, history, neighborhood, etc.

We also had the pleasure of pedaling to the best sports bars the city has to offer with The Michigan Pedaler. It was a party on two-wheels. Despite all of the modern transportation options, Detroit does not neglect to still celebrate its industrial roots. Detroit is called the Motor City for a reason, after all, and that reason is because of the legendary automotive pioneer, Henry Ford. The Henry Ford Museum had been Ford's idea. "I am collecting the history of our people as written into things their hands made and used. When we are through, we shall have reproduced American life as lived, and that, I think, is the best way of preserving at least a part of our history and tradition," Ford stated back in 1928. The museum is one of the most important history museums in the nation, it houses thousands of objects that display how ordinary Americans lived and worked along with the genius innovativeness throughout history.

Detroit's Farmer's Market, Eastern Market, is the largest indoor/outdoor marketplace in the country. It is located on a commercial stretch of 43 acres and is just a mile north of the downtown area. The market originally opened in 1841 in Cadillac Square and has been a consistent feature of Detroit ever since. In recent years, the market has become one of the centers of the public art movement. Our staff were treated to a mouthwatering tour of the marketplace courtesy of Linda Yellen from Feet on the Street Tours. Our taste buds died and went to heaven as Yellen took us through the market and showed us the many local delicacies. After our three-hour lunch, we were given time to stroll through the shops in Downtown, Midtown, and New Center.

Among all of the shiny new attractions Detroit has to offer, the remnants of the city's history have been preserved and refurbished. The city's architectural integrity has remained intact. The 1920's saw an architectural revolution and Detroit home to some of the most riveting examples of the decade's skyscraper designs the country has to offer. The skyline remains, just with a bit more curb appeal to blend with the modern world. Detroit's art scene is part of what makes the city so attractive to outsiders. The graffiti on the walls of buildings is as historic to the city as the buildings themselves. Public art is being celebrated, as it should be, throughout Detroit. The atmosphere is regarded as a canvas. The city is alive with colorful murals that depict stories of both suffering and strength. This celebration of the arts encourages young artists to express themselves legally by contributing to the beauty of the cityscape. The city holds true to its motto: 'Speramus meliora; resurget cineribus.' Which means, "We hope for better things; it will rise from the ashes." Detroit is no longer the city that the media paints it to be. The new and the old merge together to create a unique mix of past and future that celebrates Detroit's rich history of ups and downs.

Traffic Jam & Snug is a Detroit treasure. Established in 1965, it was one of the first brewpubs in Detroit. Their ever-changing menu of craft beer along with the cheese and bread they make in house earns the restaurant a 5-star rating from 360 Magazine.

MACKENZIE ZIEGLER

By Kelsey Welsh × Vaughn Lowery

Mackenzie Ziegler is literally a meteor shower in the macrocosm of entertainment. The 13-year-old was born to create and doesn't appear to have an untalented bone in her anatomy. Ziegler was just 6-years-old when she made her debut on the small screen. For six seasons, she starred alongside her mother, Melissa, and older sister, Maddie, in Lifetime's reality series Dance Moms. "When I was younger I had no clue what was going on to be honest; there was just a bunch of cameras following me around and I was just really confused," she asserts regarding the early start of her career, "But as I got older I thought it was pretty cool that everyone wanted to know what I was doing on a daily basis or what I'm doing with my career now." Since her departure from the show in 2016, she has been exploring her wide range of talents. The dance sensation has been diligently working to expand her already impressive resume to include professions such as singer, actress, model, fashion designer, and soon-to-be author.

When she was 8, she embarked on a singing career with the release of her debut album, Mack Z. The album hit #1 on the iTunes pop chart and peaked at #7 on iTunes' album sales across all genres. The lead single, "It's A Girl Party," also reached #1 on the pop charts and it's music video has been viewed over 45 million times. In 2016, she released a duet with singer and best friend, Johnny Orlando, entitled "Day & Night." Ziegler and Orlando have spent most of 2017 performing throughout North America and Europe on their Day & Night Tour. "It's so much fun," she said about the experience, "It's definitely different from dancing on stage at a competition but I think it is so much more fun because I get to be myself on stage and sing with my best friend." Musically, 2017 has been a busy year for the starlet. She has released several singles and three official music videos to date. The video for her hit single, "Monsters" has been watched over 12 million times on YouTube. "It was kind of a Stranger Things vibe which was really cool. I had this huge set and there was a bunch of production and special effects. It was the coolest thing I've ever done." She said. Ziegler's latest single, "Breathe," expresses an inspirational message she wants to get across to her fans. "The song is about being yourself and never giving up, and not to worry about what people think of you," she states, "I used to be worried of what people thought of me when I was younger but now I've learned just to take a deep breath and let it all go." The song addresses Ziegler's experiences with bullies and how she overcame all of the negativity that was thrown at her throughout life. The idea carries over to the video for her female empowerment anthem, "Teamwork." The video, which she collaborated alongside with Justice (tween girl apparel and accessories) to create in order to promote her line of dance-inspired active wear, communicates her support to her fans whom are struggling with the same sort of hatred she had to deal with in her own life. "There're a lot of bullies. I've dealt with them on social media. I feel like a lot kids have dealt with bullies in middle school, so I just think, don't let their hate get to you."

The former reality star is no stranger to being in front of the camera; however, it wasn't until recently that she had the chance to portray a character other than herself. "It was so much fun to play someone different because on reality you really just play yourself." The aspiring actress appeared as Lily in a two-episode stint on Nickelodeon's popular sitcom Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn. "It would be so cool to be on a scripted TV series," Ziegler asserts, "That's probably my dream right now." She is full of ambition and has proven that there is no dream that is too big for her to attain; therefore, fans can expect to see her return to television in the near future. Her most recent accomplishment fulfills her lifelong dream of penning a book. "Ever since I was little I've loved to read and I've always wanted to write my own books and I finally got to do that. In my book I give my tips and tricks that I use on a daily basis, and there's also some cool crafts and DIYs." Her autobiographical self-help book named, Kenzie's Rules for Life will hit the shelves May 2018.

Despite her busy schedule, Mackenzie always finds time to hang out with the people she loves most. She acknowledges that the most important aspects of her life are her friends and family. "Maddie and I basically do everything together; we go shopping, go to the movies, and get our nails done. We're best friends." Maddie is a recurring guest on Mackenzie's popular, self-named YouTube channel (Mackenzie Ziegler). "I love making YouTube videos. YouTube is a great way to connect with all of my supporters and show people who I really am by just being myself." Her favorite videos to share and watch involve the creation of DIYs. She holds an aggregate online social media following of 25 million across various channels. Her favorite platforms, besides YouTube, are Instagram and Snapchat because both allow her to give fans a glimpse of her life as well as connect with friends who she is not able to see as often as she would like. "Making plans with my friends is sometimes hard because I'm either on tour, shooting a music video, or doing a photoshoot, but whatever we do, it's always fun."

Mackenzie works hard to achieve her dreams and is blessed for the opportunities she's had. "I've always learned to stay humble and appreciate everything that I'm doing and not let it get to my head," she said. "I'm 13 and I'm doing a lot at my age." She is aware that not many people are as lucky as she has been in her life and it is very important to her and her family to give back to those who are less fortunate. "Me and my family love to give back. We just did something for Love Your Melon where we went around the hospital and gave kids hats and talked with them and it was so much fun. I think doing all of this stuff is definitely very important to me."

In short, the "Ziegler" surname seems to be defining Generation Z; and thus, Mackenzie continues to wow the world with one release after another. Furthermore, the teen sensation is poised to reach staggering heights in her career with her innovation, immense talent, sophistication, and extreme marketability.

REVENGE BODY

KHLOÉ KARDASHIAN

E!'s inspirational transformation series "Revenge Body with Khloé Kardashian" returns for season two on Sunday, January 7th at 10 pm ET/PT. With the help of model and TV personality Khloé Kardashian, author of the New York Times bestselling book "Strong Looks Better Naked," and her team of fitness, style and beauty experts, participants get the individualized help and encouragement to transform into the person they always dreamed of becoming inside and out.

During this eight-episode season, famous celebs stop by to provide advice and tough love, including pop-culture icon Kim Kardashian West. For a full list of the participants, before photos, and what has inspired them to make a change, please visit <http://eonline/2xyk7hC>, and for a sneak peek of the series visit: <http://eonline/2y9ueKG>. This original unscripted series is produced by Khloémoney Entertainment, Rogue Atlas Productions in association with Lionsgate and Ryan Seacrest Productions. Eli Frankel, Khloé Kardashian, Kris Jenner, Ryan Seacrest and Larissa Matsson serve as executive producers.

This season, 17 men and women commit to a physically and emotionally challenging journey to prove to themselves and those who have been negative forces in their lives that they're worthy of love and respect. People from all walks of life confront their past, present, and future and reveal what has brought them to this pivotal point in their lives. Whether these men and women have experienced bullying, are trying to mend relationships, or facing any other tough challenges, Khloé - who has overcome her own body issues - is there to help and will meet and check in with the participants throughout their entire process. Khloé personally gets to know them, finds out what has broken them down, and gives them the tools they need to build themselves back up. From an honorably discharged military veteran struggling with the loss of his identity to newlyweds who want to get healthy before starting a family, each episode will feature everyday people tackling what's holding them back from being the best they can be. However, even with the best intentions, not every journey is smooth, and not everyone makes it across the finish line.

Meet the Trainers:

Returning:

is an author, lecturer as well as a singer/songwriter whom hails from Malta. The son of a concert pianist is no stranger to music. His latest release "Shine at Christmas" is a fun-loving and anthemic carol. Perfect for all ages and guaranteed to tickle your fancy while making you chuckle. If Ace Ventura had a holiday song - this would be it. Superb instrumentation, production and lyrical content make this song a shoo-in for the season. However, strong voice inflection has earned this artist not only a spot in our hearts, but also a place on our #360WatchList

2018 JAGUAR F-TYPE 400

Anthony Sovinsky × Vaughn Lowery

For 2018, Jaguar is introducing a genetically enhanced version of its already popular F-Type series – the 400 Sport Coupe Special Edition. At first glimpse, the vehicle immediately appears to be a part of the family, yet subtle differences cause it to break away from the battalion. Although the F-Type didn't call for a redesign, they redefined excellence with a one-year-only configuration. This limited version exhibits tons of sporty appointments which hint nifty performance gains to be anticipated as well. The 400 Sport is featured in three different metallic colors:

Yulong White, Indus Silver and Santorini Black. It arrives in two different drive trains – AWD and RWD. Lastly, one can select between a convertible or coupe.

As of late, we had the joy of testing out the Indus Silver two-door AWD (allowing it to grip and corner with ease). While approaching the vehicle head-on, you are at once enthralled by its bespoke elements – stealthy accents on the grille fitted with an audacious front splitter adorning “400 Sport” in bold yellow. While orbiting the vehicle, we gained an admiration of its contoured yet nimble stance. Some of the new additions included blade-like extended side sills and prominent front/rear splitters which shout, “I am fast as I am athletic.” It squats on 20” Dark Satin alloy wheels that come to a stop with Super Performance 380mm front and 376mm rear brakes (currently, an upgrade featured in the 400 Sport). With a wheelbase of 103.2,” ground clearance of only 4.1” and a length of 176.5,” you can be reassured that this vehicle was built to track (very little drag coefficient w/ automatic retractable spoiler).

The F-Type 400 Sport possesses the most agile V6 offered in the series, until now still doesn't measure up to the R (V8 550hp) and SVR (V8 575hp)'s performance. It's the difference between a Ferris wheel and a roller coaster (less scream factor). Nevertheless, this 3.0L V6 400PS supercharged engine delivers 400hp with 339lb-ft of torque alongside of an 8-speed gearbox. It's 20hp faster than its forerunners. Most of it is felt in the top end which makes it worth acquiring. This increase in power also enhances the already invigorating exhaust that's expelled through the trumpet-like tips. Letting off the gas at high RPMs (5000+) will make the car backfire – crackling and popping like a 4th of July fireworks show. Don't fret, though. As prevalent in former models, Jaguar wanted to make certain you don't upset the neighbors by adding an option to tame it with the press of a button. Inside the cabin, your eyes are drawn yet again to the vibrant yellow emblems, “400 Sport” tastefully planted: the steering wheel; console finisher; embroidered headrests and tread plates, reminding you of the anomaly of which you have. In addition, slimmer premium leather performance seats improve dash to backrest space, creating a racier ambiance. For the foremost time, there's a flat-bottomed sport steering wheel accompanied by anodized aluminum paddle shifters ergonomically placed for aggressive driving. Next, you'll discover the beautifully black-coated aluminum center dash baring a touch screen infotainment system which allows you to navigate, choose your favorite station and/or Bluetooth to your smart devices.

The 2018 Jaguar F-type 400 Sport Coupe Special Edition is definitely something special. Aside from all the jaw-dropping signature patches, it offers exclusivity to the owner because of its minimal production, unique performance and cosmetic upgrades. This makes it a well-balanced vehicle of choice for those seeking something snazzy without the hefty price tag.

In short, we forecast this to become the affluent millennials' two-seater select for 2018.

Law Rock
TEXAS

in 1976, has been to embody the potential of Texas wine. Today, Llano Estacado is the largest, bestselling Premium Winery in Texas, producing wines of World Class Quality, and has been an ongoing pioneer in introducing not just Texans, but also the entire world to the great wines made in the Lone Star State. Tour and tasting at McPherson Cellars. Our new friends The McPherson family has been a part of Texas winemaking for over 40 years. Owner and Winemaker Kim McPherson greeted us and showed how he has beautifully restored the historic Coca-Cola Bottling Plant, located in Lubbock's Depot Entertainment District, into a world-class winery. We tasted their Texas wines that have won over 600 medals in state, national, and international wine competitions. They also sell cute wine merchandising, such as the famous T-Shirts with messages like "My doctor says I need glasses" or "This wine is making me awesome". 360 crew surely adores food and wine, but Lubbock had much more to offer. During our visit to the northwest city of Texas, we discovered enough from our country at the following attractions:

National Ranching Heritage Center-Dedicated to preserving and interpreting the history of ranching, it is a museum with seven exhibit galleries and a 19-acre historical park. Authentic, restored ranching structures dating from 1780 to 1950, tell the story of how early ranchers and their families adapted to a harsh environment. Annual events include Candlelight at the Ranch, an event hosted in December to recreate a frontier Christmas, and Ranch Day, an April event designed to make history come alive with cowboys, chuck wagons and horses. We were surprised by some goodies like the Smith and Wesson model revolver or the Native American real Comanche Feather Headdress.

Lubbock Lake Landmark- Smithsonian Magazine named Lubbock Lake Landmark one of the top five destinations to see evidence of first Americans. In fact, signs of human life from 12,000 years ago have been uncovered at the Lubbock Lake Landmark, the oldest continuously inhabited site in the country. This internationally recognized archaeological and national history preserve provides a perfect family outing and regularly hosts Night Hikes on a 3-mile scenic trail through the Yellow House Canyon.

Texas stands for its art in many aspects. They are well known for its modern art and the beautiful Marfa is an exceptional demonstration. Lubbock possesses art exhibitions as well;

You can experience an interactive art space like no other at Lubbock's Tornado Gallery. Tour the gallery that showcases Tony Greer's Plasma sculptures featuring Xenon tube pieces and other neon objects. Learn more about the process of creating these masterpieces and the art of glassblowing. We loved those @unitingglass pieces.

Roberto Bruno was the best architecture artist in Lubbock and his house remains as a must-see. He moved to Lubbock in 1971 to teach art at Texas Tech University's school of architecture. He started working on The Steel House in 1973, two years after sculpting a similar piece of art, which inspired him to build something bigger to live in. This three story, 2,200-square-foot house overlooks Ransom Canyon, and remained uncompleted before his death in 2008. The city also counts with several murals and a photographer alley, where the creativity spreads around the streets.

A city is not a city without its nightlife. 360 Magazine especially enjoyed performances of Charlie's Tout and Jaime Wyatt at The Bluelight Live. Other music selection we had was at Lubbock Moonlight Musicals. It inspires audiences throughout the summer with fun and exciting musicals at their outdoor amphitheater located in Mackenzie Park. Making use of local talent, as well as bringing in various Broadway professionals, Lubbock Moonlight Musicals is able to produce shows that thrill all audiences, from sophisticated theatergoers to first-timers. We saw a fascinating performance of Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain.

With a flourishing restaurant and bar scene, not to mention the unprecedented rise of craft beer and creative cocktails as of late, there's truly something for everyone in America's finest city. You'll also find championship golf courses, museums, and some other awesome restaurants as the Chimy's, Giorgio's Pizza and Torchy's tacos within city limits.

BLACK BADGE

By Vaughn Lowery × Benjamin Reese

A few years ago, Rolls-Royce began noticing that they were in somewhat of a pickle. They've unarguably been building the 'ultimate luxury car' and have been the leader in that category for over 100+ years; but as of late, the company learned the thing that they do best – isn't exactly what people want anymore.

The fresh wave of Rolls-Royce consumers are emerging 'fast money' elite within a global society whom demand more than just luxury from a brand that purely builds luxury cars. Not coincidentally, Rolls-Royce found a way to keep us in the dark about this, and in doing so created the 'Black Badge' edition to answer our cries

The Ghost Black Badge in the short-wheel base platform is much more athletic and dare we say 'naughtier' than in standard configuration. On the exterior, nearly all of the traditional chrome has been blackened including the retractable spirit of ecstasy, window trim, wheels and grille. Although it might appear subtle to the common eye, it has a lot to say to the purist, so for the manufacturer this is a win-win.

The engineering team realized what their job was – keep the class, create the hustle and make it fearless. From the ground up, the frame has been recalibrated to make the Ghost feel like you're floating on a cloud while cruising down Sunset Boulevard to driving on rails while sprinting across Mulholland Drive. Multi-layered carbon alloy composite 21-inch wheels were designed around the idea of exotic Italian super cars from the 70's era and the tires have low-rolling resistance characteristics. The brakes alone are an outstanding feature on this series and come well-outfitted with energy regeneration, dynamic/cornering control and a host of additional features.

For millennial investors, the Ghost Black Badge also receives an extra 50 or so horsepower pushing output to over 600hp. On the inside, performance and luxury is infused using technical weave on the dashboard; lambswool floor mats; a starlight headliner, which can blink you into a dream and a bespoke premium audio system pumping out 600 watts of youthfulness.

Our Ghost Black Badge arrived in piano black over an extremely irresistible cobalt blue interior with contrasting arctic white stitching which appeared better than the pinstripes on a Zegna suit. The individual seat configuration alongside a cutting-edge infotainment system, housing a 20.5GB hard drive disc for storing music files plus night vision.

The Ghost Black Badge will set you back a mere $416,605 USD, but considering that a Lamborghini will cost more and you can't bring your friends along for the ride or even hang out in the back seat – it's nothing short of astonishing. And to imagine, this is the first time we've witnessed Rolls-Royce show us their other hand!

SCHLITTERBAHN WATERPARK

SCHLITTERBAHN

3'0" 0.91' 3'0" 0.91' 3'0" 0.91' 3'0" 0.91'

Planning a family getaway? I bet you haven't thought of adding New Braunfels, Texas to the list of possible destinations, but you really should. New Braunfels, Texas is home to one of the largest immersive theme parks in the United States. Schlitterbahn Waterpark & Resort is home to the most eclectic collection of water rides in the world. Guests dive headfirst into constant adventure as they float down one of the 51 rivers, slides and chutes that the park has to offer.

Schlitterbahn translates to "slippery road" in German, honoring the heritage of the family who started it all. Bob and Billye Henry uprooted their three children in 1966 and moved from Houston to New Braunfels to pursue Bob's dream of owning and operating a small family business. The Henrys responded to a "for sale" ad in a local newspaper and purchased a cabin resort along the Comal River. They installed a tube slide that would dump their guests into the river. A few years after studying Floridian waterparks, the Henrys realized that they could incorporate the concept into their own resort; and voilà, Schlitterbahn was born. The flagship property was established in 1979 and has been offering both thrill seekers and sightseers ideal vacation experiences for nearly four decades. Since its founding, four additional properties have opened up: Galveston Island, Texas; South Padre Island, Texas; Corpus Christi, Texas (which included a 9-hole golf course); and Kansas City, Kansas.

Staff members of 360 Magazine were invited to get our feet wet and dive into the fun at the original New Braunfels location. Schlitterbahn Waterpark & Resort is a hotspot for family vacations, corporate outings, and friendly getaways. The park maintains a refreshing 72-degree temperature for the spring water that flows into the rides, tube slides and pools. The famous Boogie Bahn surfing simulator, which is one of the first of its kind in the world, is a favorite of pro-boarders, inexperienced newbies, and everyone in between. Over 50,000 gallons of water circulate over the ride's foam surface, which was built to cushion the occasional gnarly wipeout, yet the water depth measures just a few inches.

Guests can take a break from water coasters, such as the award-winning Master Blaster, and enjoy the miles of scenic river that flow amidst the 100-year-old oak, cedar and cypress trees. The river serves as a water source to the park's attractions as well as a backdrop for guests to gawk at while they slip and slide their way to an amazing vacation experience. During our visit, we found out exactly what it is about Schlitterbaun that has made it worthy of 19 consecutive, 36 overall, Amusement Today's Golden Ticket award wins.

Calling all grill-masters; Schlitterbahn is littereBBQ stations so that guests can whip up everything from hamburgers and hotdogs to grilled tofu and corn-on-the-cob. Those who are not quite so grill-savvy or simply don't feel like cooking can make use of the park's catering services or head down to one of the food stands and pick up a delicious BBQ brisket or a cheeseburger topped with flaming hot Cheetos. Guests 21-and-over can enjoy their favorite drinks by visiting one of the bars or bringing their own from home since, unlike most other theme-parks, the park is BYOB. Families can relax and enjoy their meals by taking the time to sit and snack at one of the park's many picnic spots. The resort accommodations and beautiful surroundings set Schlitterbaun apart from all other waterparks. It is perfect for all sorts of travelers: visitors can choose any of the seven room types or even opt for a stylish seven-room vacation home. Resort guests who choose to stay at one of the luxurious Riverbend Cabins are treated to an unbeatable view of the Canal River as well as given an Early Access pass to the Blastenhoff Section, where Master Blaster is located. Schlitterbahn has various room configuration options complete with a living space, kitchenette and stackable washer/dryer to keep the family's clothes fresh.

360 Magazine had a blast; we didn't want to leave! So, water you waiting for? Book your vacation and experience an aquatic adventure like no other. "Splash. Sleep. Repeat" at Schlitterbahn Waterpark. <https://www.instagram.com/schlitterbahnwaterparks/>

STARRING FRENCH DJ AND PRODUCER DJ SNAKE
FEATURING THE NEW BEATS STUDIO3 WIRELESS

Wanted to share the latest chapter of Beats by Dr. Dre's "Above the Noise" campaign which captures Geffen Records artist DJ Snake's performance on Paris' legendary Arc de Triomphe as well as a look for the first time at the journey that took him there. DJ Snake was the first performer ever to play atop the roof of the iconic French landmark on Sept 6th.

Directed by Colin Tilley, this film maps his incredible journey where he talks for the first time about how he rose from the streets of Paris to be one of the world's biggest performers and producers, and his love for the country he came from.

Talking about the film, DJ Snake says, "Playing the roof of the Arc de Triomphe was a moment I wanted to keep forever so when Beats asked me if they could make a short film about that night, and my journey to that point... it was easy to say yes."
