BIG ROME

a lyrical monster and award-winning poet, is on the rise. His testimony is inspiring; originally from Southern Missouri, this artist spent some time in a correctional facility, like many in his category. The time he spent there inspired him to change his ways and make a difference. Upon his release, he and a mentor decided to initiate a club for young people, encouraging them to love themselves and strive for success. As a songwriter, his content is undeniable. Strong wordplay and effortless delivery easily puts him into a category with some of the industry's greats. Very reminiscent of some of today's most notable talents, such as Gucci Mane and Rick Ross. His overall production and music instrumentation dishes up a tangible symphony of street gumbo. Authentic yet sophisticated, this griot has positioned himself in the forefront of what's to come. After all, having a thumping beat and hook isn't enough; right now, it's entirely about the message during this tumultuous time in America. Don't take our word for it ... check out, "Now or Never" and decide for yourself.

The Broken Hearts Club is the most recent collection from the up and coming LA brand, MCII CLOTHING. Despite the project being in its early stages, this collection takes on a completely different approach from how we interpret heartbreak, especially through fashion!

This past June, MCII CLOTHING released its first short film for the collection that, both creatively and conceptually, captures moments which resonate and reflect towards what it means to be heartbroken. From a very youthful and campy perspective, MCII CLOTHING turns the theme of heartbreak into something that is unexplainably appealing!

Visit their site to check out The Broken Hearts Club short film and to shop for the latest designs from this collection. The founder, Michael Carr II, has plans to release new products for the collection by the end of the summer!

DaniLeigh

When the end of Summer hits, the desire to rewind time kicks in, reliving every magical moment from the season's past. It's a vibe that newcomer DaniLeigh has managed to encapsulate in her debut EP Summer With Friends, coming soon. The 22-year-old singing and dancing phenomenon cut her teeth in the business when she directed a music video for her late mentor, Prince. She enhanced her buzz with back-to-back jams "Play" (featuring Kap G) and "Lurkin'," and is here to continue her mission of making music that both sounds and feels good.

The South Florida native had music in her blood, singing from a young age. As an early teen, DaniLeigh recorded YouTube covers of songs like Musiq Soulchild's "So Beautiful," though she wasn't quite ready for the big time. "I was really shy," she admits, "and I didn't realize the unique sound of my voice until later on." It wasn't until a few years later when she moved to Los Angeles at 16 that DaniLeigh began harnessing her craft. In LA she found her footing in the music industry, starting with dancing. "I was dancing in music videos, commercials, you name it," she recalls. "From there, I met a lot of producers onset and just networked." Singing became the secret weapon, as DaniLeigh would reveal her chops and be invited to studios for recording sessions. However, a life-changing encounter with the legendary Prince would be the real catalyst.

After learning of DaniLeigh's talents as a dancer (through a one-minute video clip), the Purple One reached out to have her direct his video for "Breakfast Can Wait" at just 18 years old. The video hit worldwide, appearing on networks like MTV, BET, and REVOLT. Prince ultimately took DaniLeigh under his wing, mentoring her budding singing career. His untimely death in 2016 left a void in DaniLeigh's life, though his presence is still felt as DaniLeigh's star is only getting brighter.

"Play" truly kicked things off. The high-energy single is described by DaniLeigh as an empowering anthem for women. "It's a bold statement," she says of the cut, which carries a message of "making a play" in all areas of life. "I'm a very positive person and this song I feel can help motivate people to put in that work," she says. Bringing Kap G (who is of Mexican descent) into the fold as a feature was her way of uniting more Latinos in music, as DaniLeigh's Dominican heritage is evident in both her style and sound. The single "Lurkin'" immediately followed, as a slick nod to social those stalkers who don't congratulate moves, yet look on from the social media sidelines. The song even made its way to the HBO hit series Insecure. The stage is now set for DaniLeigh to show the diverse angles of her talent on a grander scale.

Aptly titled Summer With Friends, the upcoming EP sums up DaniLeigh's past few months, which she lightheartedly describes as "just having fun and working." The relatable nature of the project brings forth the aforementioned singles, along with feel good songs that channel the young artist's inspirations including Aaliyah, Missy Elliott, and Drake while showing her ability to fuse hip-hop and R&B with poppier electronic-driven vibes. Songs like "Questions" playfully target those relationship interrogation sessions (Where were you? Who were you with?), while "Ex" is a self-explanatory track about the now-single artist's previous romance. "He got one song," she jokes. Other cuts like the infectious "On" and "All I Know" show DaniLeigh's versatility within the pop-urban landscape, while "All Day" highlights her Dominican roots. "That's a bachata beat underneath [the production]," she proudly points out. "The time right now is in alignment, showing that things are going the right way." As DaniLeigh unveils her debut Summer With Friends and the projects that follow, she maintains her goal of positive music, though has one wish involving one important angel by her side. "I always say I wish Prince was here to see all of this happening with me right now," she says. "It's okay though. I know he's watching."

Orange County natives, The Shakes, release the new music video for the track "With Every Moment," the track which their debut EP gets its namesake. The music video was directed by Benny Gigliardi, known for his works with Olympic athlete Sean White, and groundbreaking videos for other rising OC bands including Super Whatever and Hearts and Lions.

The video comes right on the heels of the young groups highly anticipated debut EP release. Upon its release, not only were loyal cult followers thrilled, but also a new segment of listeners across the country. Partly due to key, infectious tracks such as "Scumptious" immediately pulling over 200,000 plays through streaming platforms. With support from larger artists within the music scene, such as Francois Comtois of Young The Giant. Whom featured on their debut single "Somebody" last July. THE SHAKES, don't look to be slowing down anytime soon. Already in the works on their next single, coming this fall.

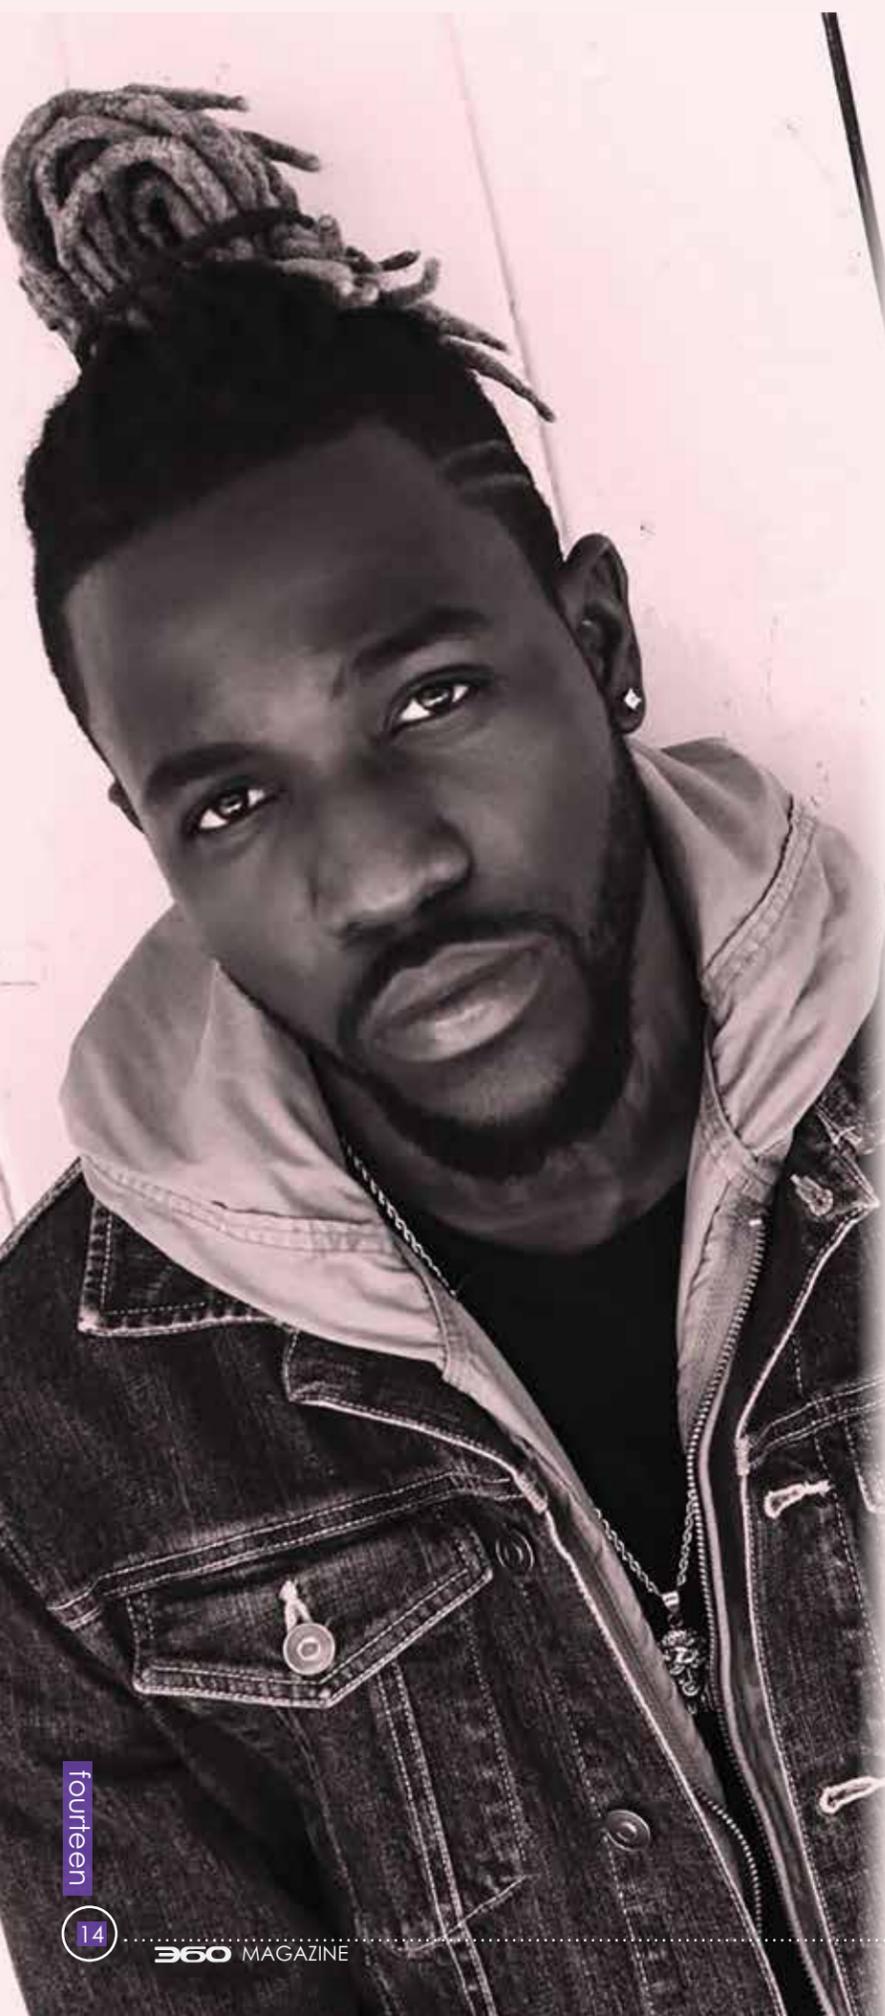

If you love the music video, make sure to keep up with them via Instagram: @theshakesmusic for some exclusive content behind their new music video and future releases coming up via IGTV.

Reggae-Dancehall Artiste Alexx A-Game Gains International Attention

It's game on for burgeoning Jamaican music talent Alex Gallimore. More popularly known by his industry moniker Alexx A-Game, the gifted reggae-dancehall artist is primed to make big moves given insider buzz from BBC1 Extra and Mixmag and his work alongside Chronixx, The Rock's biggest, most influential reggae export of the moment. Hailing from Discovery Bay in the island's garden parish, Alexx A-Game earned well-received notices as an invited performer on the line-up of Chronixx's Capture Land tour two years earlier, and is generating international media attention for his fresh approach on his recently released 10-track mixtape REAL'n TRUE Vol. 1.

Gallimore's first brush with professional performance on the world stage came in 2012 as the lead singer of Di Blueprint band, which fortuitously copped the top prize at the Global Battle of the Bands competition, leading to booked appearances on music festivals in Jamaica, Suriname, the United States and Europe. The band parted ways two years later, but Alexx soldiered on to pursue a solo career.

In 2014, he released his first official single, the self-titled motivational anthem "A-Game Everyday", produced by close friend and former bandmate Vern Hill. On the heels of a second single The Hit, he would release his first mixtape titled A-Game Everyday.

As he steadily works his way to mainstream prominence, the visual and artistically compelling artiste is building a REAL'nTRUE movement and most recently distinguished with a gushing profile in the German reggae/dancehall magazine Riddim

A blonde bombshell with a powerhouse voice, Hannah Cutt, aka Cutt is the perfect hybrid of Britney Spears and Amy Winehouse. Her debut EP Nightmares, produced by Grammy Award winner Scott Storch and Angel Lopez is dark, lyrically strong, and shockingly raw but always maintains the catchy pocket necessary for a strong pop record.

The debut single off the EP is "Messy". Sexy, aggressive, and unexpected, the husky voiced singer says Messy is a song about "...sexual frustration but also frustration in general. I wrote it when I first tried to get sober and no longer had alcohol to get out of my own head. Something I still struggle with. Messy is a fantasy song about escape"

Cutt celebrated two years of sobriety this July and describes her decision to get sober as the foundation of her development as an artist. "Nightmares is inextricably a byproduct of my sobriety. You avoid a lot of demons when you're constantly trying to control something like an addiction. When you take it away you are left with yourself. This EP is the beginning of that process- facing the fears you didn't know you had, head on"

2019 Lexus ES 350

Longer, Lower, Wider

By: Shin Takei, Automotive Editor at Large

Following the debut of the RC and LS models, the all new 2019 Lexus ES series features their Global Architecture-K (GA-K) platform and is longer, lower and wider than previous ES model. Realistically it looks much better than its predecessor and despite its lower roof, there's more room inside. There are three models offered at this time, the ES 350, ES 350H and for the first time the ES 350 F-Sport. The signature spindle grill is a vertical pattern in the ES 350 and 350H while for the F-Sport it's similar to the new LS with a wider meshed "L" pattern. The overall look is a smooth, fluid faster looking shape. Three wheel choices are available; standard 17", 18" and the 19" for the F-Sport. Powered by a 3.5-liter V-6 (2GR-FKS) engine that develops 302 horsepower @ 6,600 rpm and 267 lb-ft of torque @ 4,700 rpm the ES still returns 22mpg city, 33 mpg highway and 26 mpg combined. Each ES is built by a team lead by Master Craftsmen who go through rigorous technical training back in Japan. This includes strict discipline such as to feel by touch tolerances in panel gaps and surface irregularities.

The GA-K chassis is an extremely rigid chassis with structural adhesives and laser-weld screws as well as reinforcements for the front strut towers to improve front end stiffness. Sound deadening insulation covers 93% of the floor plan and performance dampeners reduce vibration on all Ultra Luxury and F-Sport models. Furthermore, the wheels are designed to direct road noise into the tire chamber to help quiet the ride. Dynamic Control shocks were designed to smooth out the ride and reduce roll. In the F-Sport Adaptive Variable Suspension (AVS) is offered with 650 levels of adjustment to deliver optimal ride and precise control. Instead of the steering column mounted power steering assist, a rack-assist Electric Power Steering (EPS) has been incorporated to provide precise feedback.

The ES is equipped with a Drive Mode Select system that allows the driver to choose from Eco, Normal and Sports mode for the AVS cars and those with AVS gets Sports S, Sports S+ and Custom where there are three engine and transmission programs and two steering and suspension programs. Fun stuff like quicker throttle response, faster shifting and steering parameters are enhanced. The Eco Mode is for those more environmentally concerned and the ES 350h has an all new Hybrid drivetrain that gets up to 44 combined mpg. We will report on this car when we have time to test it later. For the ES the already driver-centric cockpit has been further enhanced with a Seat in Control concept which places all instruments and switches within the direct view and reach of the driver with up to an 8" LCD display as well as an optional Heads-Up display. An additional Multi-Media display sits high in the line of sight with up to a 12.3" Navigation Electro Multi Vision (EMV) screen. All of this is accessible through an updated Remote Touch Interface (RTI). Headroom was increased despite the lower roofline because of a lower hip point and headliner positioning. A more natural steering wheel angle as well as revised pedal position and the 10-way power adjustable seats contribute to a comfortable driving environment. There are three interior color schemes, four types of trim and three different material choices for the seats. The F-Sport gets an additional Circuit Red seats and door panels. There are three wood trims and for the F Sport an aluminum trim inspired by the Japanese sword called Hadori Aluminum is included.

Being connected is now a breeze with the ES with Apple CarPlay® and Amazon Alexa®. While the standard audio is a 10-speaker Pioneer system, the optional Mark Levinson with 17 speakers and 1,800 watts of power is available for the audiophile. Onboard Wi-Fi by Verizon is standard and the Lexus Enform Safety Connect is free for a year and Lexus Enform Service Connect reminds you of maintenance schedules. Other features include Lexus Enform Remote that connects your phone with your ES to perform certain functions, Lexus Safety System 2.0 with daytime bicyclist detection, Pre-Collision System (PCS), Lane Departure Assist (LDA), Lane Tracing Assist (LTA), All Speed Range Dynamic Radar Cruise Control (DRCC) and Road Sign Assist (RSA) in case you missed it.

So how does it drive? The ES 350 is a pretty nice package of comfort and performance which brings the car to previously uncharted territory and finally cuts the grade with its rivals. The F Sport brings excitement by being a worthy contender with added emotional content. Because of the engineering, one might forget that the ES is still a front drive configuration until it is driven to the limit and even if so, it retains its composure. Most drivers will never get there but it is reassuring to know that if you ever do, the ES will be quite stable. The steering has enough feel and stability and directs the car exactly where you want it to go in spirited driving. It's refreshing to think you can drive an ES hard and actually enjoy it.

The result of Chief Designer Yasuo Kajino and Chief Engineer Yasuhiro Sakakibara's creation is remarkable. They set out to move on from the past image often associated with the ES which were good but boring or unexciting. The 2019 Lexus ES 350 is a car to look forward to especially if you are looking into buying or leasing a car in this crowded segment. You will be looking forward to driving this car for fun and not just a car to transport yourself to and from your destination.

Wengie is a sensation on YouTube with over 12 million subscribers. Her videos possess over 1 billion cumulative views and she has 1.6 million followers on her Instagram. Wengie was born in Guangzhou, China and grew up in Sydney Australia. She built a brand so unique through social media platforms and got her start on YouTube five years ago.

Wengie's YouTube videos offer a wide range of content for her fans filled with quirkiness, lifestyle regimens, hair tutorials, pranks, craft ideas, life hacks, skin care tutorials, and fashion videos. Because of her vast variety and ability to capture her target audience her following is strong because there is something for everyone in her audience! YouTube along with other social media platforms have allowed her to share her creations with the rest of the world. She posts videos on a regular basis and has seamlessly built an online community of fans. Stated Wengie: "Most of the time I read more comments from fans than texts from my close friends."

"It's a strange feeling to grasp hold of, but I do actually think of them like a family. They've been there and supported me through so much that often I have an urge to tell them things I haven't even told my close friends! They are also so willing to help me when I get stuck for inspiration or need suggestions for my content - I wouldn't be where I am today without their supportive and constructive feedback!"

Nothing can stop her and she is beginning to explore her other talents in the entertainment industry. Wengie is going back to her roots with the release of her latest single, "Cake." Wengie gave her fans and music lovers a slice of pop heaven with this track. The music video for the song premiered on her YouTube Channel and already has millions of views!

Stated Wengie: "I've always loved how music has been able to make you feel a certain way and music has gotten me through huge events in my life like breakups and happy moments like summers with friends. I want to be able to give that gift to my listeners."

"A big trend in pop music currently is making listeners feel good and ultimately make them dance. Dance music has been so prominent in popular culture for the last six years because of those two reasons. Right now, I want to make fun music that lifts your mood! So, something that makes you want to hum and dance! If I had to put it in a genre it would be pop," said Wengie.

Now that Wengie is about to enter the realm of pop music, her dream collaborations musically would be with Australian record producer and DJ, Flume and British electronic music band, Clean Bandit. Flume has released two studio albums and has remixed songs for artists such as Lorde, Sam Smith, Arcade Fire, Hermitude, and Disclosure. Clean Bandit recently collaborated with Demi Lovato on the hit song, "Solo."

"I love Flume's work!! He is also a fellow Aussie! I also am obsessed with Clean Bandit's style," said Wengie.

Fashion has also played a key role in her career on social media. She likes to inform her fans about affordable clothing and other accessories that she loves and uses in her everyday life. She might have a slight obsession with denim. She likes to look at what's trending in fashion at that very moment in time and adding her own twist.

"I love to be comfortable, so I lean towards more casual and sporty aesthetic! I feel like I tend to mix anything with denim!! I just love denim - dressing it up and down! I also like to play with jackets and platform boots! I also love changing things up and trying new things! Right now, I'm loving platform boots with a fluffy faux jacket! So comfortable and glam," said Wengie.

Wengie is an influencer herself on YouTube but is also a huge fan of fellow YouTuber, Liza Koshy who is an American actress, YouTube comedian, and television host. Wengie had the privilege of meeting Koshy.

"I love Liza Koshy!! She's so adorable and when I met her she's so sweet and kind in real life as well," said Wengie.

Often, influencers on YouTube will collaborate or make appearances on one another's videos. Recently, Wengie filmed a collaboration with Joey Graceffa and they hit it off immediately. She also likes to hang out with Collin Keys who is another famous influencer on YouTube.

"I had such a great time filming a collaboration with him (Graceffa)! Because we are in different countries and busy, I try and either text him or DM him on Instagram! If I need advice on anything YouTube related he is one of the people I'd reach out to," said Wengie.

The Create Your Summer Tour featured Wengie, Karina Garcia and Natalies Outlet. It kicked off on July 10th in San Diego, CA and ended on August 5th in Santa Ana, CA. This was Wengie's opportunity to meet her fans and see their faces in person. She was excited to meet her online family and give them hugs.

"It was so beautiful seeing their faces and I always get surprised how far they travel and how much love they have! I'm grateful every day to have them in my life," said Wengie.

Over the years, Wengie has been doing what she loves and has been a creative force on social media to be reckoned with. She has been putting herself out there and has given so much to her fans. Wengie wants to continue this journey and focus on the present but is excited to see what the future holds. For anyone who wants to start their own YouTube Channel, she believes that one must do it for the right reasons and that will make their journey so much fun.

"It's because, in the beginning, it is so tough! It's like working for a demanding boss for free without knowing if you'll ever get a promotion, and you're not getting paid either! I wanted to start my channel not to grow fans or follows but mainly to share what I learned. And even if one person watched it and thanked me that was good enough for me! I would say make content consistently but not only that, aim to grow and improve it every time you make a new video. I used to challenge myself to use a new editing technique every video I made and over time I became good at editing! So be patient and try and learn something new every time," said Wengie.

"When one puts themselves out there, they could potentially face criticism or receive some not very nice comments. Bullying has been a huge issue in today's world with social media," but Wengie does not let those kinds of things bother her in any sort of way.

"If you're putting yourself out there there's no way to escape negative comments! It's completely natural for people to not agree with your point of view and I always believe sometimes it's better to agree than to disagree. They can have their opinion, but it doesn't need to affect my life! It's best also not to pay attention to them because sometimes they just are doing it to get a reaction, so I usually don't give them much attention unless I feel it's constructive and I could grow from it," said Wengie.

Nothing can stop Wengie at the height of her career. The Australian native is nearly unstoppable with the release of her latest pop single and music video, "Cake" and The Create Your Summer Tour under her belt. It is very exciting to see this shooting star rise to the top. Her journey to this point in her career is inspiring for all young people who have a dream of becoming somebody. It takes hard work, dedication, and time. Wengie is a prime example of those things and it shows.

"Cake" is currently available on all streaming platforms and for additional information on The Create Your Summer Tour which has already concluded visit createyoursummertour.com

Chef Adrienne Calvo:
Maximum Flavor Boss

her restaurant have piled on a slew of awards and recognitions, with no sign of slowing down. Patrons regularly travel from far and wide, including myself, to experience what many have called the finest restaurant in all of Miami. This has helped Chef Adrienne become a force in the food industry as a celebrity chef with a huge and rapidly-growing fan base. Her businesses now include both her restaurant and Cracked, one of the most successful new food trucks in South Florida. Additionally, she has authored four cookbooks, with a fifth, The A-List, currently in production. Huge companies have taken notice of her success, as she currently endorses Reebok, Diamond Resorts, and Sprint, to name a few.

you can still find her on the line at her restaurant, creating some of her most famous dishes using her signature Maximum Flavor style. Regardless of how successful she has become as an entrepreneur, she is not above putting in the work herself to ensure that her sterling reputation stays intact. There is no telling the peaks the Chef Adrienne will one day reach. One thing is for sure, however.

A boss like her will always put in the work.

Most people want to be the boss. It is natural to want to be in control and to reap the benefits of your labor someday down the line. People like the idea of building something from the ground up, only to appreciate how far it has come as they admire their empire years later. Unfortunately, most people aren't willing to do what it takes to be the boss.

Chef Adrienne Calvo is not one of those people.

She opened Chef Adrienne's Vineyard Restaurant and Wine Bar in 2007, at just 22 years old. She had recently finished her studies at the College of Culinary Arts at Johnson & Wales University, and decided to test her skills in the restaurant business. Normally, as a young female restaurateur opening a fine dining spot, this would spell doom in the highly-competitive South Florida food market. What's more, Chef Adrienne's opened in a Miami suburb not exactly known for its touristy appeal. As she puts it...

"In culinary school, we were taught 'Location! Location! Location!' But I learned that people will drive for great food almost anywhere. They will go to the 'cool', 'see and be seen' spots once, but if the food isn't good they will not return."

Fast forward to 2018, and Chef Adrienne and

CHATTANOOGA

CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

Krishan Narsinghani x Vaughn Lowery

With breathtaking views, historic caves, and a landscape of bright green wisps, Rock City Gardens in Chattanooga, Tennessee awed 360 Magazine's Food & Travel team the first day of their grand expedition. Let's rewind to earlier that morning which commenced with a heavenly breakfast and tour at the Tennessee Aquarium, veterans of preservation and research thanks to their famous conservation institute. Grossing more than $115 million for the city is a lump sum amount that has helped propel Chattanooga's economic growth. Six miles from downtown, world travelers will spot roaring waterfalls that encapsulate with their bliss. These are only to be found at Rock City Gardens, a must-see hotspot annually visited by over half-million tourists around the world. Next stop was a tour of Ruby Falls, a purple-lit waterfall hidden more than 1,120 feet below the surface of Lookout Mountain. This attraction gets its name after the wife of Leo Lambert, an excavator leader back in the late 1920s.

Don't think the falls are done yet! Throughout the trip, visitors will discover the immense beauty within the nature surrounding the city. For example, visit Foster Falls to explore intricate rock formations, trek across wooden bridges, and hike around the mighty fall. One may wonder how to cover the 143 miles of Chattanooga all by foot in only a few days. Get off your feet with a Segway Tour and discover the city's hottest attractions - The Dome Building, Tivoli Theatre, Ross's Landing, Miller Plaza, Warehouse Row, Urban Stack, and the Chattanooga Choo-Choo. Stop by High Point Climbing who endorse indoor and outdoor activities for climbers of all ages. Whether you call it the "Country's Climbing Gym" or the "Country's Coolest Gym," this state-of-the-art facility has 30,000 sq. ft. of climbing surface as well as two 15-meter speed climbing walls.

Celebrating over fifty years of business, Jim Oliver's Smoke House is a major tourist attraction. The business started with two employees, six counter stools, a jukebox, a pinball machine, and a parking lot that served as the dining room and fist fight brawling area. Today, more than 2,000,000 guests have come through the doors of Jim's family owned barbecue restaurant and lodge. The Olivers offer Motels and Hideaway Cabins as well as free recreation for their residents. Recreation includes basketball courts, a mountain goat trail, picnic areas, a fishing lake, and children's playground.

The whole experience behind Jim Oliver's Smoke House is magical. Live music accompanied the 360 team at dinner as they feasted on succulent burnt ends, tasty ribs, and ended the meal with homemade ice cream and warm drizzled fudge.

SOUTH AFRICA

by Chris Phan, Krishan Narsinghani x Vaughn Lowery

Recently, 360 Magazine traveled to South Africa during one of the largest travel conventions on the continent. One hundred journalists from Northern America joined Indaba Media in celebration of Nelson Mandela's 100th birthday. Nelson Mandela is respected as the "Father of the Nation." He was an anti-apartheid revolutionary, political leader and philanthropist, who served as President from 1994 to 1999.

Mandela also served as the President of the African National Congress (ANC) party from 1991 to 1997. Mandela was the country's first black head of state and the first elected in a fully representative democratic election. His vision was to dismantle apartheid (a system of segregation based on race) by tackling discrimination and fostering reconciliation. Mandela looked ahead and realized the law must change in order for a better future. Twenty-four years after the corrupt system was terminated, South Africa has been in overdrive to establish a firm democracy.

INDABA CONVENTION

The great city of Durban took the 360 team by storm with Indaba (<https://www.indaba-southafrica.co.za/>) - a meet and greet of media and travel agents to express their views and attractions on what the city and South Africa has to offer.

Day one of the Indaba Convention, journalists met at the Maharani Hotel for an opening ceremony. Later, trade show floor booths opened for business at the Durban International Convention Center in addition to presentations from various industry professionals. During the press conference, it was said that the trip's airline, British Airways (<https://www.britishairways.com/>) would now offer direct non-stop flights between Heathrow Airport and Durban. Indaba also touched on other tourist attractions. South Africa offers an unbelievable amount of restaurants, markets, bars and lounges, but take pride that they surpass expectations in their food & drink festivals (<https://bit.ly/2MFWotZ>).

The Whisky Live Festival and South African Cheese Festival are two major events - just to name a few.

Human rights were another important topic discussed at the convention. The South African people continue to exuberate equality and fairness along with an effort to amend the ways in which the LGBT and minority communities are treated while traveling (<https://bit.ly/2NbiZFa>). As the evening winded down, an opportunity for networking commenced. Soon after, journalists engaged in conversation while devouring traditional eats coupled with a small beer/wine reception followed by a brief fashion presentation.

On day two of Indaba, Durban Tourism celebrated a dinner cruise on La Vue Floating Restaurant (<http://www.la-vue.co.za>). The 85-foot luxury catamaran (200-person capacity) features two amazing decks, two full bars and a dance floor. Cozy with great cocktails - it's perfect for groups.

DURBAN

Durban's population is just over 595,000. The metropolitan area has a population of over 3.8 million and is known for its golden beaches, relaxed surf culture and vibrant culinary scene (some of the best spicy curry dishes said to rival India's). Culture stems from a blend of Zulu, Indian, European and remnants of British roots that make up the city's diverse heritage. South Africa's Station Drive Precinct (<https://m.facebook.com/stationdriveprecinct>), once a rundown warehouse district has been transformed to a major tourist attraction with exceptional fine dining, drinking and shopping. Thanks to a collaborative group of artistic individuals, businesses range from homegrown distilleries and breweries to local art galleries. I Heart Market (<https://www.iheartmarket.com/>) is a food and design market held on the first Saturday of each month. Presented with locally produced goods and artisanal creations such as ceramics, crochet toys and original prints - shoppers will not be disappointed. Nearby tourists can partake in an exquisite gin tasting at Distillery 031 along with lunch at Lion's Match Factory.

The feasting does not stop there - Durban's own, House of Curries restaurant, (<https://www.dining-out.co.za/md/House-of-Curries/3773>) blends bold Indian spices and flavors for extravagant curry dishes. House of Curries has been a staple on the Florida Road strip since 1999 and a perfect attraction for relaxation on their patio deck.

Much like a market, Durban's BAT Centre is a place where local artists and crafters work on-site, exhibiting and selling their works in a vibrant complex. This nonprofit arts center is dedicated to the preservation, promotion and celebration of the visual arts, crafts, music, dance and literature of the Province. Street art has found new life in redevelopment projects across various neighborhoods. These street artists were inspired by their surroundings with many exploring themes of politics and nature, all whilst using their work for social activism.

Travelers in search of nighttime adventures can visit Cubana Havana, a popular cigar/hookah lounge featuring handcrafted cocktails as well as a simple menu located on the highly revered Mahatma Gandhi Road in downtown Durban for an evening of fine music at a world-class Jazz bar known as The Chairman (<http://www.thechairmanlive.com/phone/index.html>). Not only is there an assortment of signature cocktails and cigars, but also a gallery and sophisticated atmosphere that believes in justice for all. Fun fact. Over 85% of all BMW 3 Series vehicles are produced at the Rosslyn plant just outside of Durban and are shipped to various markets worldwide, including the USA, Taiwan, Japan, Singapore, New Zealand, Hong Kong, Australia, Sub-Saharan Africa and Canada.

JOHANNESBURG

The expedition kicked off in Johannesburg aka "Joburg," (approximately 8 million in population and largest city in the country), the epicenter of South Africa who's currently in a state of revival. The team then headed to Nelson Mandela Square, a must-see tourist spot. The campus includes the DaVinci Hotel (<http://www.legacyhotels.co.za/hotels/davinci-hotel-and-suites>), indoor and outdoor shopping malls, upscale boutiques, a movie theatre, grocery stores, restaurants/bars and a casino. In order to achieve a local feel, stop by Neighborgoods Market (<http://www.neighborgoodsmarket.co.za>) for purchases of South African eats and assorted libations distributed from multiple vendors. The following day we departed for Constitution Hill and embarked on a full tour of the visitor's center. Constitution Hill was a former fort site transformed into a prison. "The Robben Island of Johannesburg" included notable prisoners Mahatma Gandhi, Joe Slovo, Bram Fischer and Nelson Mandela. Mandela was imprisoned for more than twenty years at this location. "As an African American being able to stand inside the actual cell of Mandela was life-changing. The dark, ominous confined space gave me a newfound appreciation of what it means to be free. No human should ever have to endure such injustice because they yearn for social equality and justice for all," says Lowery, President of 360 Magazine.

Lunch at Lebo's Backpackers Outdoor Restaurant was set outside in various cabanas at a local Soweto hostel within its community park followed by the Soweto Tuk Tuk Tour. The team enjoyed riding in these three-wheeled taxis, while sipping on craft beers and witnessing the city's rich history. Stops included Vilakazi Street, where Nelson Mandela's house still stands, as well as Hector Peterson Memorial.

Art lovers be sure to drop by CIRCA Gallery which stands beside Everard Read headquarters (<https://www.everard-read.co.za>), parading some of the most important contemporary art collections from around the world. With regards to nightlife, music lovers can head to Taboo Night Club (<https://www.facebook.com/TabooJHB/>) and News Café (<http://www.newscafe.co.za>) to discover local and international DJ's. News Cafe combines its food, services and venue into a coffee bar, cocktail bar, restaurant and entertainment venue all-in-one. It's the perfect destination for relaxation or clubbing with a modern aesthetic.

CAPE TOWN

From Johannesburg, the voyage shifted to Cape Town, a world renowned entertainment and prestigious modeling hub for some of the industries top talents. With just under 4 million in population, it's considered the second most populous city in South Africa. The group checked in at The Table Bay Hotel (<https://www.suninternational.com/table-bay>) and visited Nobel Square for a photo opportunity followed by lunch at V&A Waterfront's The Yard Restaurant. Just adjacent in the Silo District is the highly acclaimed Zeitz Mocaa Museum (<https://www.instagram.com/zeitzmocaa>). It exhibits twenty-first century contemporary art from Africa and its Diaspora with over 100 galleries throughout 9 floors, showcasing art from still photography to moving art installations.

Our local guide incorporated "Footsteps to Freedom" walking tour "Mandela in Cape Town: From Prisoner to President." Dinner at the Crypt Jazz Club was a personal favorite from the team as they feasted into the night while being enamored by some of the nation's most prolific local musicians.

Table Mountain's Cable Car Ride (<https://www.tablemountain.net>) offers 360 degree spectacular views of the coastal town while being hoisted to the top. At the summit, clouds draped the surrounding view while journalists snapped selfies for Instagram. On the other hand, if winds are too strong for the cable ride, adventurers can hike alongside of the mountains during park hours to witness this landmark backdrop engulfed by condensation - similar in type to dry ice in a bucket. Just below, you can take in Bo-Kaap township, an area filled with colorful homes and cobblestone roads. Subsequently, lunch was served by famed chef Abigail Mballo (from MasterChef South Africa) at 4ROOMED Ekasi Culture. She's widely known to take indigenous delights and fuse them into gourmet bites fit for the Food Network. The day ended with a night of laughter at the Cape Town Comedy Club, a must-visit for all who enjoy pizzas infused with locally sourced ingredients coupled with a barrel of laughs.

PORT ELIZABETH

At Port Elizabeth, history unfolded. In 1820, it was established to house British settlers and boasts a population of 1.3 million, as it's now a part of the newly formed Nelson Mandela Bay. This Vegas-style resort town is home to Sun International's The Boardwalk Hotel (<https://www.suninternational.com/boardwalk/>) that includes tons of shops, eateries, bars and casinos within walking distance. Named The Public Art City Tour: Route 67, stops included a visit to Voting Line Sculpture and Nelson Mandela Metropolitan Art Museum. Lastly, dinner at Asada/Fushin was a meal to remember. The restaurant fabricates South African fusion flare with scrumptious fresh seafood and sushi.

Within two weeks, we received a first-hand account of the history and culture behind Nelson Mandela and his legacy in South Africa. With an intricate four major city tour, we were able to experience an amazing arts and culinary scene in the ever-changing country of South Africa. Given the plethora of outdoor activities, architectural gems, gorgeous landscapes and tender-hearted people, this destination should be at the top of everyone's bucket list if it's not already.

THE 2018 CAMARO 2SS 1LE THE MODERN-DAY MUSCLE CAR

BY VAUGHN LOWERY × ANTHONY SOVINSKY

The 2018 Camaro 2SS defines the modern-day muscle car. It thrusts power with a new focus on aerodynamics and handling. Its overstated presence remains true, but with enhanced design features - it has the auto world watching.

The vehicle features the 1LE track package finished in a silver ice metallic coating with a prominent front grille ending at a point. It sports a sleek black mesh grille and vents that are strategically positioned on the hood to enhance the breathing and cooling mechanisms. The stance is wide and athletic, thanks to the 20" forged aluminum wheels, in combination with aggressive sized fenders for increased handling capabilities. Let's our attention to the rear of the vehicle. The taillights are streamlined to accent the masculine contours and racing additions. This includes a black finished spoiler and chrome polished quad pipes that sing the sweet melody of a manually shifted 6.2-liter V8 putting down 455HP to the crank.

As of late, 360 MAGAZINE had the opportunity to pilot the Chevy on a variety of escapades around Los Angeles county. To begin, the team traveled to the first annual Brunch Life Festival in Long Beach. The fest featured a variety of different restaurants from Long Beach, Orange County and LA serving anything from gourmet burgers to delectable desserts.

At Sneaker Con LA held in Anaheim, 360 had the pleasure of interviewing the design manager for Global Chevrolet Color and Trim, Brett Golliff. Sneaker Con was the perfect location to meet Brett as his love for sneakers and street wear is unparalleled - a passion that has blossomed since 1993. Before his career at Chevrolet, Brett worked as a shoe designer for New Balance. His design philosophy is simple. "Form follows function," said Golliff. "Successful design is nothing without a purpose and reason for being. It should always be routed in function. Once you have the function you are solving for, make it look beautiful."

Before his current role, Golliff focused on Chevrolet performance vehicles. His most recent work can be seen on the sixth-generation Chevrolet Camaro and seventh-generation Corvette, including the new 2019 Corvette ZR1, the most capable Corvette made to this date.

Driving a manual car in traffic can be frustrating, however the Camaro's smooth clutch and short shifter made the repetitive shifting in stop-and-go traffic a breeze. In addition, it is more spacious than a coupe, as a group of four can fit with ease. The versatility to function as both a pure sports vehicle and luxury vehicle make the Camaro an ideal commuter car.

The Camaro 2SS's 1LE track package will cost an additional $7,000USD. It highlights a variety of performance additions, including magnetic ride control, beefed up 20" wheels (Summer tires only), Recaro performance front bucket seats, electronic limited slip differential, dual mode performance exhaust, suede finished flat bottom sport steering wheel and shift knob, satin black blade spoiler, satin black hood wrap, satin black front splitter and Brembo performance brakes with red calipers - talk about bang for your buck.

With no access to a track, the trip shifted to a driving hotspot, Mulholland drive - a road which can expose the inadequacy in handling with some of the most elite vehicles in production. When put to the test, the beauty performed as intended, handling narrow twists and turns of the canyon with grace. Thanks to magnetic ride control, body roll is virtually absent staying extremely flat in back-to-back turns almost as if it was riding on rails - a feeling usually experienced in its European counterpart. Moreover, with the rev matching feature activated, the 6.2L V8 will keep power consistent when down shifting heading into a turn that provides more acceleration and traction while exiting. This is a neat feature for those who have not yet learned the intricacies of a manually shifted vehicle, making it enjoyable for even the novice enthusiast.

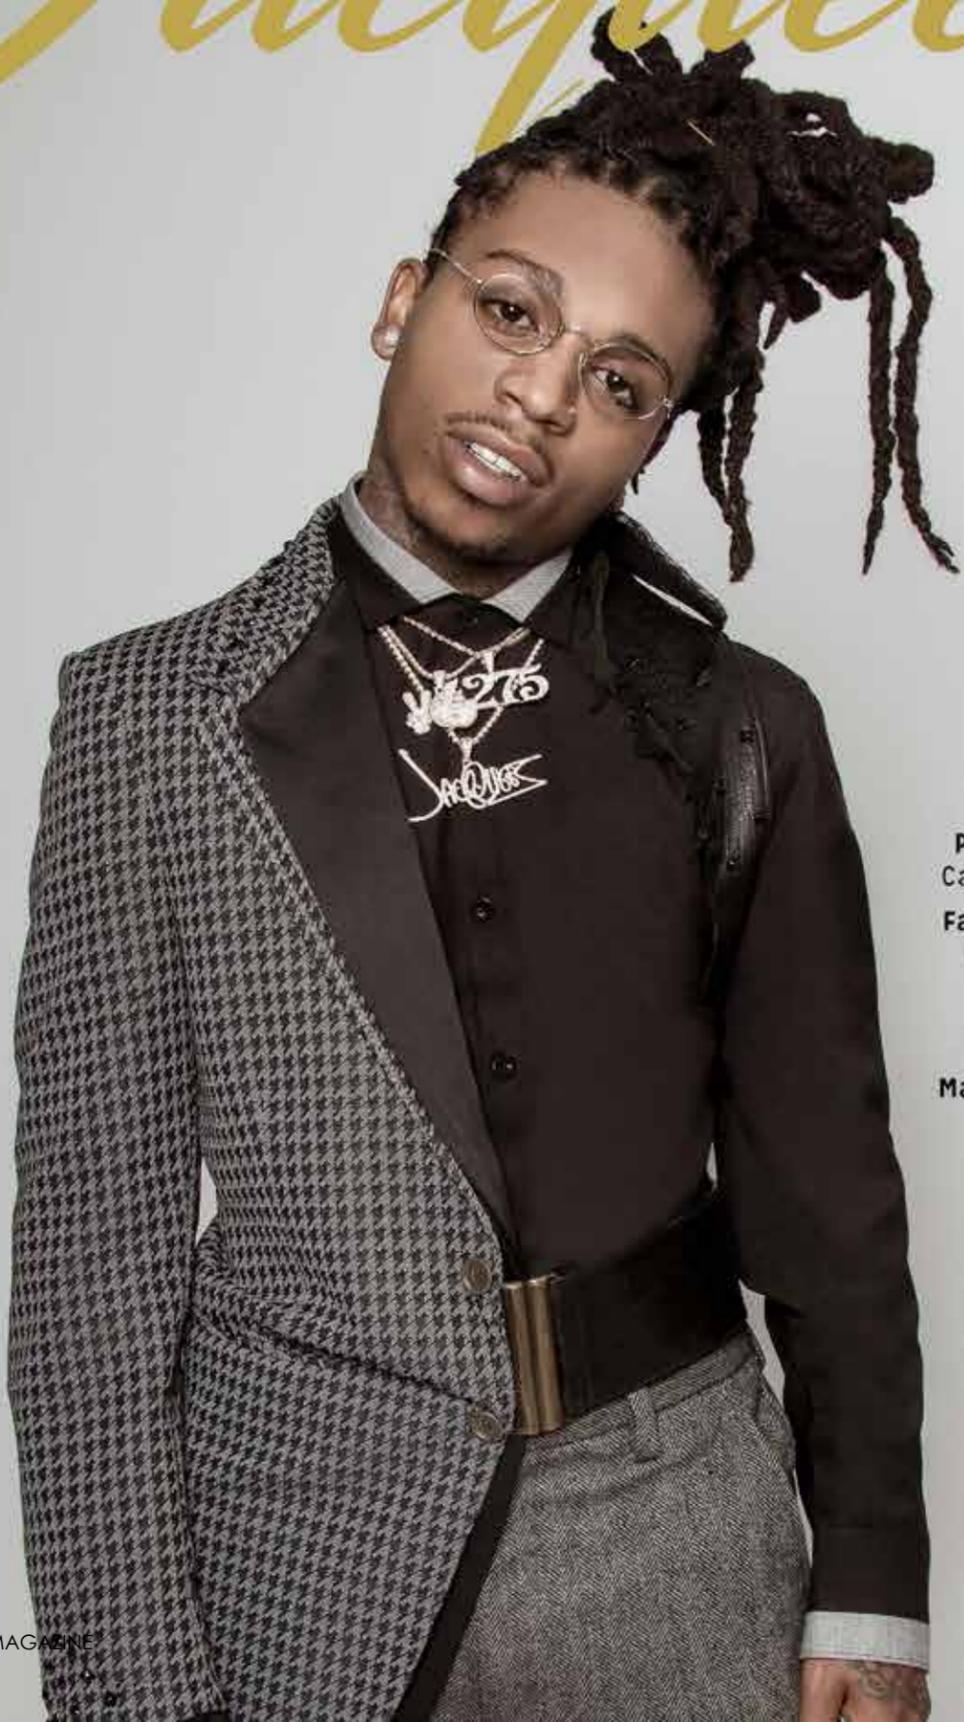

The interior is simple, allowing the driver to focus on what really matters - the road. It features a Chevrolet Mylink audio system with navigation ($495USD) on an 8-inch diagonal touch screen that is also compatible with Apple Car Play and Android Drive. Furthermore, one can opt for the performance data and video recorder ($1300USD) that can record several metrics and provide feedback on the driver's performance.

Valued at $42,000USD for the base model and an additional $7,000USD for the 1LE track package plus extra features available upon request, the total comes to a modest $51,790USD for a full-blown track super star. The noteworthy 2018 Camaro is a steal for anyone looking to acquire an entry level sport vehicle.

With names like Nicki Minaj, Lil Wayne, and Drake on the roster, Cash Money Records is responsible for helping to create some of the greatest R&B and hip-hop artists of our generation. The label's newest superstar, R&B phenomenon Jaquees, found success with his hit single "B.E.D." which peaked at number 69 on the Billboard Top 100 last summer and has just recently achieved platinum status.

"When I went gold, I was so happy but, you know, gold is just the first step," Jaquees told 360 Magazine. "You go gold 9 times out of 10 you go platinum. I was so excited when I went gold. Someone was telling me not even to go get the gold plaque and just wait until I went platinum but I wanted the gold one too. It's my first one. It feels good. This is where I'm at, it's where I'm going to be."

Jaquees has some big plans for the near future that will keep his name relevant in the music scene. "I'm working with Chris Brown on an album right now," the singer said. "I've been working with him since I was 18. As far as this album goes, it's different from when we first worked together, it's actually more fun now and the music is better. Chris, as dope as he is, he's always giving me pointers."

Jaquees may be new to the mainstream spotlight but he has been dreaming of making it big in music for more than half of his life. The 24-year-old made his on-stage debut at age 9 when he performed in a talent show in his hometown of Decatur, Georgia. At 12, Jaquees had moved on from local talent competitions and into the studio and released his very first EP, I am Jaquees, by the time he was 14.

He felt that the label he worked with at the beginning of his career did not foster the sort of environment that would allow him to fully explore his potential so he decided to release his second EP, 19, independently in 2014. 19 debuted at number 15 on the US Billboard Top R&B Albums and featured guest appearances by Chris Brown, Rich Homie Quan, Lloyd, and Trinidad James. Despite the success of his second EP, Jaquees would go on to sign with Cash Money Records just a few months after its release. In 2016, Jaquees released Mood under the label and went on his first ever tour to promote the mixtape. Out of the 27 shows he played while on tour, 26 of the venues had been completely sold out.

"They made my dreams come true," he said. "When I signed to Cash Money I saw the shift. It was everything I'd dreamed of. I was nominated for my first award [iHeartMusic Award for R&B Song of the Year]. Bruno Mars won, but just being nominated feels good. Everything is going up. [I'm] getting ready to drop my album, 4275."

The album, 4275, pays tribute to the singer's past and everything that lead him to his current success. Jaquees' songs showcase his depth and he is very intentional with the creative choices that he makes.

Even the album's title is symbolic as the inspiration for it came from his childhood address, 4275 Wesley Drive. Throughout all of Jaquees' success as a musician, he and his family still remember their roots and he makes sure to return to his hometown to give back to the community that allowed him to thrive.

"[My family and I] do a lot for the homeless. My mom and my sisters go out probably every two weeks and they go around the city of Atlanta and give out food and clothes. You know, my mom goes through her closet every week and goes out there and gives her stuff away. When I went on the Mood tour a year before last I had a day in my neighborhood where I had food for everyone and some of those big inflatable [bounce houses] and we invited the whole community to come out and have a good time," Jaquees said.

Jaquees had a bit of advice to offer all of the aspiring artists out there looking to make it big: "Dream big and stay focused," he said.

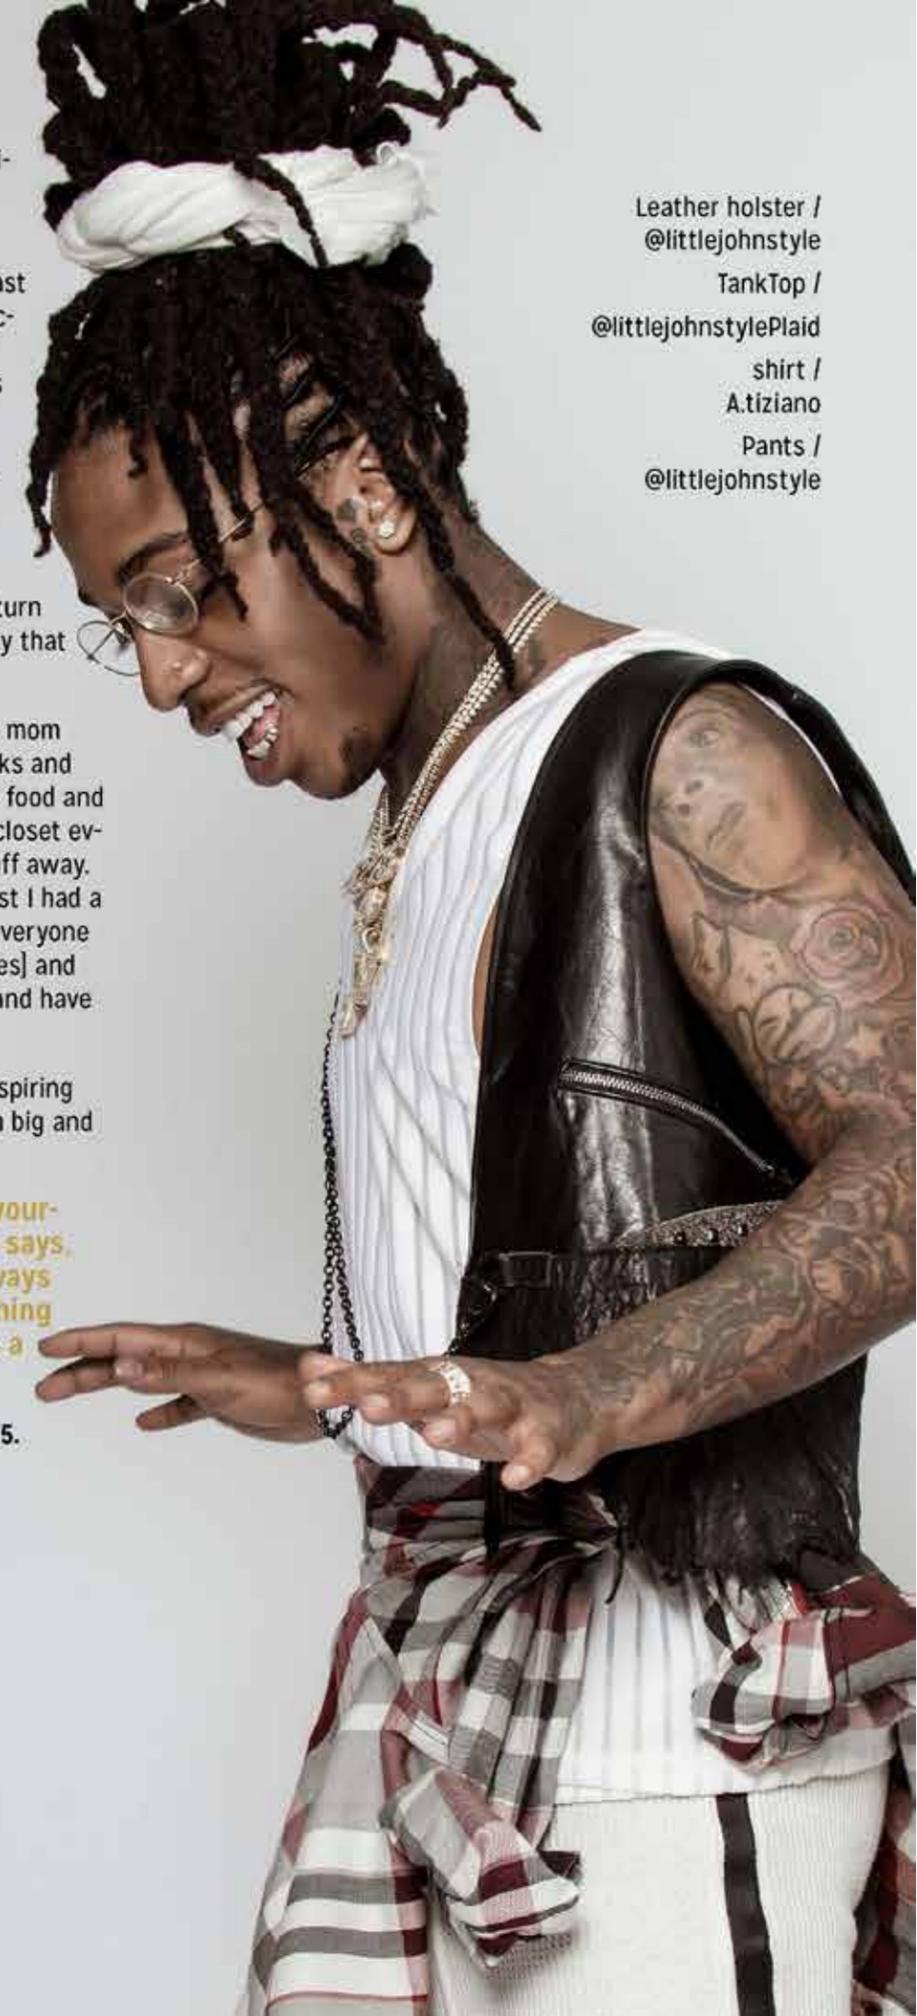

"Anything is possible. Just believe in yourself and don't believe what anyone else says, believe what you think. That's how I always did it. But at the same time, there's nothing wrong with listening. A great listener is a great leader."

Keep an eye out for Jaquees' debut album, 4275.

PUMP SUPREME

Reebok just released their latest version of the Pump Supreme on September 1st. The first iteration of the shoe, the Reebok Pump was introduced in 1989 and draws inspiration from the 90's while featuring a clean, modern edge. The Pump Supreme is a modern, sophisticated performance shoe that features a laceless upper and one of Reebok's most iconic technologies, The Pump, which delivers a hyper-customized fit.

The striking silhouette has quickly gained attention in both performance and high-end fashion circles, with previous iterations from Vetements and Opening Ceremony. With its clean look and innovative style, this new iteration of Pump Supreme features a speckled midsole and Flexweave technology, which add to an already impressive design.

Check out the product highlights here:
STYLE: Drawing inspiration from the 90's, the Pump Supreme is a contemporary fusion of performance and lifestyle in one silhouette with an all-over technical knit upper that forms to the foot.

INNOVATION: The Pump technology design inflates for a custom fit, allowing the shoe to sit closer to the foot.

PERFORMANCE DRIVEN: The speckled midsoles, laceless upper and revolutionary Flexweave technology are combined to deliver a unique, customized fit that results in a shoe engineered to perform as you train for your next competition.
